How We Got Here

Fall 2006
Ad Hoc Committee and City Managers tour homeless services facilities.

April 2007
CAO David Janssen confirms ongoing funding package and availability of planning funds.
Where We Stand Today

- $150,000 in planning funds available.
- $1.2 million in ongoing annual county funding available.
- Prospect of $4 million capital available.
- Special acknowledgement is given to Supervisors Knabe and Molina for planning funds and overall support.
- Draft RFP for Needs Assessment and Strategy being finalized.
- RFP will select a consultant to identify existing services, service gaps and strategy for filling the service gaps for each of the following:
  - Count, Plan and Evaluate
  - Street Outreach and Emergency Response
Where We Stand Today

- Multi-disciplinary Regional Referral Centers (also known as “intake” or “stabilization”)
- Emergency shelter, especially winter shelter
- Detoxification housing in preparation for transitional housing
- Transitional housing with supportive services
- Permanent housing and supportive services
- Community Education

Consultant will work with cities to identify strategies suitable to the region. The goal is integration of services into a regional system serving all of the Gateway Cities. Services may be expansions of existing services, facilities and providers or may be new.
Who Stands to Benefit

FAMILIES

Southern California’s housing shortage has many families living on the edge. Minor setback can push them into homelessness. Prevention services may keep them in their homes; homeless services may keep them safe and shorten their period of homelessness.

EMANCIPATED FOSTER YOUTH

These comprise significant portion of the homeless population. They typically lack the resources and skills to move directly from foster care to independent housing.
Who Stands to Benefit

VETERANS
These are another significant portion of the homeless population. The current international conflicts are expected to produce the next generation of homeless veteran.

MENTALLY ILL AND SUBSTANCE ABUSERS
This group is a significant portion of the chronically homeless. Shelters, hospitals and law enforcement serve these persons repeatedly at a very high cost. For this population, modern integrated services, including permanent supportive housing, hold out the promise of stopping the revolving door.
Who Stands to Benefit

BUSINESSES

Businesses currently experience disruption from persons living and/or soliciting assistance on the streets; business owners seek humane alternatives.

COMMUNITIES

Often open space and community spaces such as parks and bus stops serve as shelter for homeless persons. Communities stand to benefit from traditional housing services that would return these public spaces to their intended use.
Who Stands to Benefit

PARKS, PUBLIC WORKS
AND CALTRANS MAINTENANCE DEPARTMENTS

Resources are now spent on cleaning outdoor living spaces and on confrontations with homeless persons that are not the best use of these resources, not within the expertise of these staff and often leave staff demoralized.

THE HEALTH CARE SYSTEM

Emergency room resources are repeatedly spent on homeless persons who could be stabilized with primary and preventive care.
Who Stands to Benefit

LAW ENFORCEMENT

Local law enforcement spends time, money and jail space on repeated encounters with homeless persons; these resources could be redirected to serious crimes.
